Short description:

To commemorate the 70th anniversary of the Schuman Declaration, the project "Schuman 2.0 – A new Momentum for Europe" engaged citizens, activists from civil society organizations (hereinafter, CSOs) and universities to:

1. Reflect on the Schuman Declaration, remembering the historical roots of the European project U to understand it funding values and innovative character;
2. Look back at the early days of the history of European integration as inspiration to renew the foundations of EU unity;
3. Develop "new declarations" for the future of Europe, as a way of participating in the reflection on reshaping EU mission and structure in the years to come to complete the project launched by Schuman.

As per workplan, the project focused in particular on citizens from all social and economic backgrounds from cities normally left outside the European debates that take place in capitals.

Firstly, through an Ambassadors' Training held in Brussels on 14-15 December 2019 we gathered 40 young people from 22 countries interested to become Ambassadors for the project, act as multipliers of the project communication material and act as facilitators during the local events. The young Ambassadors learned about the Schuman declaration and its historical and political context, how to co-organise local events, how to facilitate activities involving participants from different backgrounds and nationalities. Interaction and the exchange of ideas was encouraged and participants learned from one another as well as from expert speakers and facilitators.

Secondly, the Ambassadors had the chance to put their newly-acquired skills and capabilities in practice through the support to the organisation of 6 events across Europe in different geographies and social and political contexts (Lille, Trieste, Tartu, Bilbao, Graz and Hamburg). In each grassroots event, co-organised by us and local partners, participants were first engaged in an historical reflection on the Schuman Declaration, and then encouraged to form and share their perception on the initial aspirations of the European project as stated in the Schuman Declaration, confront it with the view of participants from other EU countries and reflect on the best way to renew the EU's mission in the framework of the current challenges facing the Europeans. During these events, participants had also the opportunity to engage in collaborative activities to propose their "new Schuman Declarations" to address current EU challenges.

Finally, the project ended with the final Citizens Summit on Europe Day, the 9th May 2020, through a webinar meeting on Zoom. The final event is meant to present the meaning of the Schuman declaration and discuss on its long-term perspectives. As part of the project, we launched a contest for a "Schuman 2.0 declaration", inviting citizens to write their new Schuman 2.0 Declaration proposing constructive measures to progress European integration, and embrace the challenges of today, while respecting the spirit of Schuman. 265 people participated to our Declaration contest and 54 declarations were submitted fitting the criteria. The final award was proclaimed on 19 June 2020.

The project involved directly close to 900 citizens and civil society activists and we estimate that indirectly it reached out to more than 320000 citizens across Europe through project promoters and partners' networks and communication channels throughout project duration.
